What is Measuring the Mountain?

Measuring the Mountain is a co-productive approach to evaluating the impact of the Social Services & Wellbeing (Wales) Act 2014. It's a Welsh Government-funded, all-Wales collaboration of the public sector, third sector and, most importantly, the people who live here.

At its core, Measuring the Mountain is about understanding people's experiences of social care. This could mean having care and support in your home, having a social worker or being a carer; it could mean being given information and advice about care, support and social services for you or for someone else; it could mean having, or providing, care regularly, or only from time to time.

We want to know about an experience you've been involved in from the last 12 months and your thoughts about that experience. By sharing this, you will be helping to inform Welsh Government, social care professionals and others about how services are run, what works well and what could be done differently.

We'll use the hundreds of stories we collect to inform later stages of the project, including a Citizens' Jury: an exciting approach to engaging people in complex areas of policy. The Jury will be fully supported to examine evidence and question 'witnesses' before reaching conclusions to share with Welsh Government, social care professionals and people in Wales.

Throughout its lifetime, Measuring the Mountain will share its findings, conclusions and recommendations through reports, presentations and the website.

On the next pages you'll be asked to share your story, give it a title and respond to some questions about it. We take your privacy seriously and won't be able to identify you from the information you provide, to help with this, we ask that you do not use real names in your story.

20) What are the first 4 characters of your postcode?

- Lots of people would have had a similar experience
- All people would have had a similar experience

Please place a mark on the bar that best describes the experience you have just shared.

10) The information I received allowed me to make the best decisions

I didn't receive any information that was useful to me  I received too much information, I was overwhelmed

Too hard to say

11) I was able to discuss what mattered to me with social care staff

They didn't care about what I had to say  They asked too many questions, I wish they'd just got on with it

Too hard to say

12) Social care staff acted upon those discussions

They went against my opinions and wishes  They did not challenge me, even when I may have been wrong

Too hard to say

Other:

I don't know

Please put a mark in the triangle in the position that best describes the experience you just shared. The closer the mark is to any one statement, the more you agree with that statement, placing the mark in the centre means you agree equally with all three.

If a question does not relate to your experience, please tick the 'none of these' box.
